ON FORAGING FOR RABBIS

By Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath

The open season for rabbi hunting is just about over and much big game has been bagged. Consequently, during the next few weeks, many prize catches and unprecedented finds will be on exhibition, for the first time. The "Yomim Noroyim," the awesome Holy Days, will find not a few congregants bustling and surging to their seats, not alone for strictly religious reasons, nor even to view the "Autumn Fashion Display," but likewise for the purpose of satisfying their breathless curiosity. "What manner of booty did our particular pulpit committee capture?", is the importunate query on every lip. "Is he a good golfer?", asks the sportsman. "Is he handsome?", begs the suppressed one. "Is he single?", entreats the hopeful. "How is his bridge?", demand all the rest. All important interrogations, to be sure, interrogations, which not infrequently form the fundamental rules of this interesting pursuit of rabbis. And how very many 'worshippers,'—we use the word in its technical rather than in its real connotation—who finally land in their pews just in time for the Rosh Hashonah sermon will be doomed to bitter disappointment: Mayhap the pulpit committee, "entrusted with the guardianship of our rights and liberties" in this game of rabbi hunting have proved recreant to their sacred task. Mayhap they have brought into our midst one who is "oh, so terribly serious," perhaps on "altogether too idealistic," "too studious," "not nearly enough of a mixer," "a regular dub at golf and hopeless at bridge." So will run the comments pro and con and the benighted members of the pulpit committee had better hie themselves to some impregnable shelter.

All of which suggests to me the fact that our whole standard of evaluation is somewhat "tomer farkehrt," somewhat upside down. If a man is a glib speaker, of pleasant appearance, perfectly mannered, and above all, wholly devoid of an accent, then little else is required. His previous record, his achievement or failure, his organizational ability, his pedagogic experience and, "Has v'sholom", God forbid, his scholarship matter little, for most rabbis are selected solely upon the basis of that most abominable and inexcusable institution—the "trial sermon." Nor is this true of rabbis alone. A little article which we culled recently from a local newspaper gives evidence to its general use, or rather, abuse—"Candidates should not be admitted to the pulpit of any vacant church," it reads. "The ability to preach one or two good sermons is no proof of fitness for a particular pastorate. The world is full of smooth tongued men who can charm the ears of an unsuspecting congregation, while there are other men of solid worth who are so overcome with nervousness when preaching a candidate's sermon that they make a miserable impression. Listening to men preach does not solve, but rather complicates the problem of making a wise choice."

To all of which I chant a loud and hearty "Amen," and I hasten to add that in this particular at least the pulpit committee of "Holy Blossom" must be congratulated upon the dignified and honorable manner in which they just recently filled their vacant pulpit. They did

PACIFISM AND THE ARABS

I

We never did like cross-word puzzles, and we confess that we were not sent into a transport of elation by the fantastic puzzle propounded by our new editorial colleague who is now the wearer of Rabbi Isserman's vacated shoes.

We tried hard, reading Rabbi Eisendrath's editorial both vertically and horizontally to find out whether we are pacifists or not. Doing the puzzle vertically first, we made out the suggestion that "Mighty Maurice" Samuel and "Lusty Ludwig" Lewisohn both believe that Jews are by nature pacifists. It was a bit disconcerting to find the bombastic drivel of Maurice Samuel bracketed with the glowing emotional reveries of Ludwig Lewisohn. But one is accustomed to strange combinations in cross-word puzzles. At the bottom we gained the notion that Jews (Rabbis are fond of speaking of the Jewish people as "the Jew" as if there were such an animal as a typical Jew extant) are really not innately pacifist, but they may have a sort of "peace-loving tradition".

When we delved into the spread of mystification on the second column we unearthed the startling idea that while "granted that in the main, the Jew has not sought to slay every Arab in sight" . . . nevertheless "the cry went up to mobilize a Jewish army, to wreak primeval vengeance on the Arab". . . . Further, that "Palestine must be defended at the point of the bayonet, if not by ourselves then by Great Britain, at least—in other words, Moses Levy takes his militarism vicariously by sending John Smith to the front." (italics not ours).

One would be justified in assuming from this part of the puzzle that the Jews are a bad lot, guilty of militarism whether they themselves do the fighting or they let the British do it. But we were driven to bewilderment again by the observations later on in the conundrum expressed as follows: "What earthly use, I ask, is Palestine, its University, its Tel-a-Vivs, its Wailing Walls, if it fails to exemplify the fundamental Hebraic ideal of peace? Not by nature are we pacific, but we have a great opportunity to demonstrate to the world our traditional idealism, by dwelling together with the Arab and Christian in harmony and peace".

From the remaining collocation of words we gleaned the profound thoughts that Rabbis are disheartening when they think of Palestine in terms of its economic needs, and that it is permissible to "let our moneys flow bountifully for relief: for medicine, clothing and food—and we might also add for the education of the Arab" (may the Rabbi's God bless 'em).

We could not solve the riddle from its vertical configuration alone. We therefore attempted to work out the puzzle by reading the lines horizontally across the two columns. We were really piqued to find out whether we were pacifists or not, and, what is still more important, whether we should not immediately launch a campaign in conjunction with the campaign of the Jewish communists to raise money for the Arabs.

"THE STUDENT PRINCE"

At His Majesty's Theatre Sept. 30th

"The Student Prince," with music by Sigmund Romberg, composer of "Blossom Time" and lyrics by Dorothy Donnelly, which is declared to be the most popular in the entire history of the theatre comes to His Majesty's Theatre for one week's engagement beginning Monday evening, September 30th with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

It has been found that the following which has been built up by "The Student Prince" is composed of persons who go again and again to hear the operetta, regarding it as a work that has become immediately standard. As persons go to Grand Opera to compare the work of various artists, whom they have seen in the same role, so they are going to "The Student Prince." An amazing feature of the tour of "The Student Prince" is that constant return engagements, separated by only a few weeks, are possible;—not only possible but are accompanied by crowded houses.

This constant and continuing popularity of "The Student Prince" forces the best in talent that can be secured. All this company headed by Ruth Willis and Lloyd Garrett, are included: Alice Starke, William Lilling, Guy Alexander, James Heenan, Joseph Martel, Edward Keller, W. H. White, Sylvia De Franco, Margaret Wells, Bette Sylvia and Reed Blue, in addition to the male student chorus of fifty trained singers.

Rabbi Eisendrath's Editorials

not regard the available rabbis as so many race horses to be placed in the undignified position of rival contestants for a muchly coveted post. Relegating even the long hallowed but hopelessly antiquated trial sermon with all its invidious comparisons and contrasts to the limbo of the past, where in very truth it belongs, they sought, from past records and recommendation, the answer to that one vital query. "Does this man fulfill our requirements?" and straightway, without embarassment or undue treading upon sensitive spirits, they proceeded in a most praiseworthy fashion. Those eliminated must have been grateful at least for the gentlemanliness of this procedure; the one finally selected is deeply appreciative, to be sure. Whether they chose wisely or not, only the future can tell; that they chose decently and with finesse, this editorial seeks to make known to all. And it were well that their efforts be judged finally upon the basis not of a shallow popularity, a social catechism, or a sporting questionnaire, but of a serious application to the problems of the day, a profound appreciation of Jewish values, a sincere and earnest dedication to truth, and an unswerving loyalty to those ideals and principles which should mark the life and character of any one who steps into the pulpit of synagogue or church. In this respect, at least, I am hopeful, nay confident, that the pulpit committee of "Holy Blossom" has not betrayed its trust. Let others, confronted with a similar task—a delicate one at best—learn from them, as well as the writer of the article quoted above, the standards and methods for all future foraging for rabbis.

Find Reds Falsified News of Palestine

The Communist party of America and its public press, particularly the editors of The Morning Freiheit, Yiddish Communist daily, were condemned after "trial" by the vote of 2,500 men and women at the Central Opera House, where it was charged that the Communist organs had "maliciously falsified the news" of the Palestine outbreaks to make it appear that they were part of "a revolution of oppressed Arabian masses against British imperialism and its Zionist allies."

"Witnesses" called by the New York City committee of the Jewish National Workers' Alliance of America, under whose auspices the "trial" was held, pointed out that the reaction of The Freiheit from Aug. 22 to Aug. 28 was the reaction of most of the Jews in the world who deplored the aggressions of the Arabs. Subsequently, it was declared, on orders from Moscow, the Communist editors changed a "pogrom" into a "revolt" and went so far as to charge the Jews with attacking the Arabs.

The local Communists then sent greeting, it was said, to the Arabian Congress, part of whose program was the disfranchisement of the Jews and the stopping of Jewish immigration.

The "witnesses" were a group of Jewish journalists and editors, including S. Niger, Dr. L. Muckdony, A. Ravutzky, Chayim Feinman, H. Ehrenreich and Dr. Chayim Greenberg.

L. Lehrer, who acted as "the devil's advocate," in seeking to analyze the psychology of the Communist movement, explained the attitude of the Communist in terms of abnormal psychology, illustrating his remarks by references to Freud, Jung and others. He "defended" the volte-face of the Communist Freiheit's editors by asserting that they were victims of "abnormal psychology," and said that "never before in the history of justice has it happened that we have had to sit in justice over a lunatic asylum."

Charging that the Communists had distorted the facts of the Palestine attacks because they were abnormally on the lookout for "the faintest sounds of the beginning of the world revolution," Mr. Lehrer and the other speakers said that the direction to the local Communists to adopt the "Arab revolt" explanation came from Moscow.

Mr. Lehrer suggested that the Communist movement be viewed from the standpoint of a study in morbid psychology and proposed to the audience that instead of blacklisting The Freiheit they continue to read it. The suggestion evoked a loud chorus of "No, no!"

Mr. Niger declared that those who opposed the Communist interpretation, including three of the editors who resigned, were branded as "counter-revolutionaries," "betrayers of the working class" and "agents of the bourgeoisie." He charged the Communists with "demoralizing the Jewish people, their culture and their labor movement."

The jury of writers presented their verdict in the form of a resolution which was adopted with approval by the audience. The resolution recited that the Jewish Communists had "defended the Arab hooligans," that they "wilfully and maliciously falsified the news from Palestine" and did "their very worst to charge the very victims of the pogrom with the atrocities committed against them."

After asserting that "this treacherous attitude of the Jewish Communists is quite in line with the criminal irresponsibility of all their activity in Jewish life"... the Communists were blamed for "their demoralizing influence within the ranks of Jewish labor; their betrayal of Jewish culture and their spread of assimilationist tendencies among the Jewish workers."

In conclusion the resolution said: "We, Jewish workers, this day assembled, solemnly declare it our deep conviction that the accused are guilty as charged.

"We condemn them and place them beyond the pale of Jewish labor and Jewish public life. We call upon the Jewish workers and Jewry at large to join us in this verdict, which springs from our most sacred faith in Jewish culture, in the Jewish masses and in the Jewish people."

ZIONIST NEWS

Canadian Zionist Organization cabled $100,000 for the Jewish National Fund, this being the fourth installment on the million dollars pledged by the Canadian Zionists to redeem 50,000 dunams in the plain of Sharon. In addition to this, the Palestine Relief Fund Committee has already collected over $110,000 and the work for Emergency Fund is still going on.

National Meeting on Palestine Urged

The American Jewish Congress at a special conference of executives, members and delegates at the Hotel Pennsylvania directed its administrative committee to cause a national all-Jewish conference to be convened at the earliest possible date for the consideration of all problems arising out of the existing situation in Palestine.

The American Jewish Congress has already entered into correspondence with Felix Warburg of the Jewish Agency, suggesting that such a conference be called by the latter organization. In a reply, read at the meeting, Mr. Warburg expressed the opinion that the time was not ripe for such a conference, but the administrative committee was directed to continue negotiations with the Jewish Agency before considering any other plans.

The conference, as outlined, would not only deal with the immediate need of the Jewish people in Palestine, but would consider all such measures as might lead to the most

The marriage was solemnized in the Quebec suite of the Chateau Laurier Saturday, September 14th, at 8 p. m. of Miss Elsa Rosenthal, daughter of Mrs. Rosenthal and the late Adolphe Rosenthal, and David Henry Werblow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Werblow, of White Plains, N. Y. Rabbi Nathan Kollin, assisted by Rev. J. Mirsky, officiated. Gladioli and palms were used to decorate the suite. The wedding music was played by Mrs. S. Rosenthal. The wedding ring was an antique which had been in the bride's family for generations. Given in marriage by her uncle, Harry Rosenthal, the bride wore a gown of antique ivory satin, fashioned on princess lines. The skirt was made in an uneven hem line and was very long in the back. The sleeves were of net and her long tulle wedding veil was caught in a Juliette cap effect with a circle of orange blossoms. Her shower bouquet was of lily-of-the-valley. Miss Evelyn Rosenthal, sister of the bride, wore a figured taffeta dress in autumn shades, made bouffant style. She carried an arm bouquet of Talisman roses. Mrs. Rosenthal, mother of the bride, wore a gown of black lace and chiffon, and a corsage of orchids and lily-of-the-valley. Mrs. Martha Sanger, of New York, was in dove grey and chiffon lace. A reception was held. Mr. and Mrs. Werblow left on a trip to the White Mountains. The bride travelled in a navy blue broadcloth ensemble with collar and cuffs of beige caracul and an eggshell satin blouse. Her hat was of beige. They will live in White Plains, N. Y. The out-of-town guests included Robert M. Werblow and JJmes Werblow, of White Plains, N. Y.; Dr. Louis Berman, Joseph Quittner, Mrs. Martha Sanger and Charles Sanger, all of New York.

THE HOSPITAL CAMPAIGN—A SYMBOL OF UNITY

It is great to see how all factions and fractions of Jewish Montreal are united in the project of a Jewish hospital. It seems that all artificial divisions and barriers of so-called aristocracy and snobocracy have crumbled to the ground. Shul Jews and Temple Jews, Jews from the East side and West side, and the poor and the rich—all are giving and working in behalf of this institution of mercy. Judging from the enthusiasm evidenced everywhere, I have no doubt that when the campaign is brought to a close on Monday the thirtieth of September, that at least the huge sum of one million dollars shall have been raised. My—we can accomplish much when we Jews are united! It is to be regretted, however, that we seem to unite on rare occasions and then only in those movements that pertain to human suffering and misery, or when distress overtakes us. I do hope in the near future, our community will be able to present a united front in its demands for Jewish rights and in the higher causes of Jewish life, such as Jewish education. We do need unity. In unity there is strength. We can have unity if we possess the courage and the understanding to rise above the petty and the small. In other words, if we are big!

TWO OUTSTANDING CITIZENS DEPART

This week we have laid to rest two lovable citizens of our community—Bernard Goldstein and Samuel Wener. Both of these gentlemen gave of themselves and their substance to all that was good and beautiful. They will be missed and that after all is the finest tribute we can pay them. To the bereaved, we extend our sympathy.

THE PLIGHT OF THE JEWISH STUDENT

It is a pity to see such large numbers of Jewish students unable to gain admission in the local institutions for higher learning. Of course, the general reason given is that there is a lack of accommodation. Be that as it may—the 'verboten" sign seems to be placed primarily for the student of Semitic origin. The state of affairs is a sad one indeed. The young Jew finds himself in a precarious mental state as a result. He soon develops the complex of "discrimination" and this is justifiable. He feels that in the face of freedom and liberty, he is denied the privilege of gaining knowledge. Now, the love for learning is native to the soul of the Jew. Throughout the centuries, it has been inculcated into him that wisdom is precious above rubies and gold. And if he is not given the opportunity to gain knowledge in one locality, he is bound to seek it elsewhere. Thus many youths are forced to leave this Province for other colleges in other lands. Before too many Jewish students leave, might it not be well to investigate conditions? Might not some organized effort be made to bring about an understanding that will be helpful both to those in charge of the colleges and the Jewish students? Certainly the Jewish student problem deserves more than average attention. Quebec needs its youth. Montreal can not afford to estrange its youth. Canada needs these youths designated as Jewish. They have been an asset to many lands and can be of tremendous human value to this land—the Dominion. Who will dare to speak and act in behalf of the Jewish student?

OUR CHILDREN

The Rise of David Levinsky

A Novel by Abraham Cahan

By arrangement with HARPER and BROTHERS, Copyright.

Some time later I sat on a cane chair amid flower-beds in front of the Rigi Kulm, inhaling the scented evening air and gazing down the sloping side of the lawn. Women and girls were returning from the post-office, many of them with letters in their hands. Some of these were so impatient to know their contents that they were straining their eyes to read them in the sickly light that fell from a sparse row of electric lamps. I watched their faces. In one case it was quite evident that the letetr was a love-message, and that the girl who was reading it was tremendously happy. In another I wondered whether the misdire had come from a son. It was for Miss Tevkin's return that I was watching. But the diner-gong sounded before she made her appearance.

CHAPTER III

Dinner at the Rigi Kulm on a Saturday evening was not merely a meal. It was, in addition, or chiefly, a great social function and a gown contest.

The band was playing. As each matron or girl made her appearance in the vast dining-room the female boarders already seated would look her over with feverish interest, comparing her gown and diamonds with their own. It was as though it were especially for this parade of dresses and finery that the band was playing. As the women came trooping in, arrayed for the exhibition, some timid, others brazenly self-confident, they seemed to be marching in time to the music, like so many chorus-girls tripping before a theater audience, or like a procession of model-girls at a style-display in a big department store. Many of the women strutted affectedly, with "refined" mien. Indeed, I knew that most of them had a feeling as though wearing a hundred-and-fifty-dollar dress was in itself culture and education.

Mrs. Kaleh kept talking to me,

THE HIGHLANDS OF ONTARIO ARE AT THEIR BEST IN SEPTEMBER

You'll like the hazy warmth of September days in the Highlands. You'll like the breath of pine and cedar that is heavy on the air. Everything you do will seem just right. All the Summer sports are in full swing—wonderful golf and tennis—boating—hiking—riding. You can't choose a better tonic than a few Autumn weeks in Ontario's Lake-lands. There is excellent accommodation at any of the resort territories—Muskoka Lakes, Lake of Bays, Kawartha Lakes or Georgian Bay. Any Agent of Canadian National Railways will gladly help you make your choice, make reservations, etc.

AUTUMN IS CANADA'S TRAVEL-TIME

Travel takes on new joys in Autumn. The days are not too warm. The nights are refreshingly cool. Scenery looks different too. Trees and foliage are lavish with brilliant color. Every hillside is a riot of reds, yellows, greens and browns.

Now is a good time to see the Maritimes and Quebec . . . or the Highlands of Ontario . . . or Jasper National Park and the Pacific Coast. Take your clubs along—you'll meet ideal golfing weather wherever you go.

Detailed information will be gladly supplied by any Agent of Canadian National Railways.

Every Friday

Something of what is happening to the Jewish religion in Soviet Russia under the Communists' attempt to make the nation atheistic may be learned from an article in the current Atlantic Monthly called "The Struggle For the Russian Soul" by William Henry Chamberlain. The writer says that the struggle for the Russian soul between the Communists and the Orthodox Jews and others is one of the most complicated and interesting of the psychological dramas being enacted in the Soviet Union. What he says of special Jewish interest will be given here, in parts verbatim.

With atheism almost a state creed the attitude of Communism toward all forms of religious practice is uncompromisingly hostile. Renunciation of religious faith is a condition of membership in the Communist Party and no effort is spared to wean away all the people from all religions, Jewish and others. The people are taught that religion serves to divert the masses from class war and class struggle, that it is "opium for the people." Communist opposition to religion rests upon this conception of Lenin and upon the Marxist principle of materialism which excludes any supernatural or idealistic interpretation of the phenomena of life and nature.

During 1927, 14 synagogues were closed, supposedly by the will of local toilers and not by administrative authority purely. A more recent indication of a new, active anti-religious policy of the Communist Party was published last March in "Pravda" in an article by the Commissar of Education, Anatole Lunacharsky. He speaks of "the great objective of most quickly transforming the whole growing generation into an absolutely atheistic one." Estimating the number of religious teachers at 30 or 40 percent of the entire number, he warns them that every opportunity will be used to replace them with new ones of anti-religious sentiment. Children's parades against religion are in conformity with this general policy.

The anti-religious policy is strengthening itself by other means. Printers are urged to boycott religious literature by refusing to print it. Only a score or so of religious publications are permitted by the Soviet Union and they are restricted by the central organ of censorship to a few thousand copies for each issue. To counteract the effect of religious publications the government issues a weekly journal called "Godless" for the general population and the "Anti-religious Worker" for the agitators. Lectures and anti-religious moving pictures and a central anti-religious museum assist atheism. There is agitation against the leasing of municipalized houses to religious bodies for purposes of worship and private people cannot lease houses for this purpose because they are subjected to such pressure from the authorities.

Mr. Chamberlain says that the Communist Party is impartial in its advance against all religions. Judaism is neither more nor less "opium for the people" than any other religion. When the government closed a Baptist seminary in Moscow is also closed a Jewish rabbinical seminary which had existed semi-legally in Vitebsk Province. Russian Orthodox Judaism has never been actively counter-revolutionary in the sense that the Russian Orthodox Church has been counter-revolutionary. Even the most Conservative Jews had before them the spectre of pogroms and this has been sufficient to keep them from working for the overthrow of the Soviet regime. Judaism is exposed to the same forms of hostile agitation and pressure as other religions but has a greater fear of what might happen if it became actively counter-revolutionary. Mr. Chamberlain says that Jewish Communists are most active in urging their co-racialists to forsake religious practices and do what they can to turn synagogues into workers' clubs. Will these facts mean that Judaism will lose out faster than the other religions?

The writer makes this comment on the effect of the system upon Jews and Russian Christians: the lukewarm and indifferent fall off but those who remain loyal are strengthened and deepened in their faith. In the writer's opinion, how the Communist effort in atheism will end depends upon how far religion is the product of the influences of habit, authority, tradition and early training and how far it is a psychological and spiritual need of human nature.

now aloud, now in whispers. She was passing judgment on the gowns and incidentally initiating me into some of the innermost details of the gown race. It appeared that the women kept tab on one another's dresses, shirt-waists, shoes, ribbons, pins, earrings. She pointed out two matrons who had never been seen twice in the same dress, waist, or skirt, although they had lived at the hotel for more than five weeks. Of one woman she informed me that she could afford to wear a new gown every hour in the year, but that she was "too big a slob to dress up and too lazy to undress even when she went to bed"; of another, that she would owe her grocer and butcher rather than go to the country with less than ten big trunks full of duds; of a third, that she was repeatedly threatening to leave the hotel because its bills of fare were typewritten, whereas "for the money she paid she could go to a place with printed menu-cards.

"Must have been brought up on printed menu-cards," one of the other women at our table commented, with a laugh

"That's right," Mrs. Kalch assented, appreciatively. "I could not say whether her father was a horse-driver or a stoker in a bath-house, but I do know that her husband kept a coal-and-ice cellar a few years ago."

"That'll do," her bewhiskered husband snarled "It's about time you gave your tongue a rest."

Auntie Yetta's golden teeth glittered good-humoredly. The next instant she called my attention to a woman who, driven to despair by the superiority of her "bosom friend's" gowns, had gone to the city for a fortnight, ostensibly to look for a new flat, but in reality to replenish her wardrobe. She had just returned, on the big "husband train," and now "her bosom friend won't be able to eat or sleep, trying to guess what kind of dresses she brought back."

Nor was this the only kind of gossip upon which Mrs. Kalch regaled me She told me, for example, of some sensational discoveries made by several boarders regarding a certain mother of five children, of her sister who was "not a bit better," and of a couple who were supposed to be man and wife, but who seemed to be "somebody else's man and somebody else's wife."

At last Miss Tevkin and Miss Siegel entered the dining-room. Something like a thrill passed through me. I felt like exclaiming, "At last!"

"That's the one I met you with, isn't it? Not bad-looking," said Mrs. Kalch.

"Which do you mean?"

"Which do you mean! The tall one, of course; the one you were so set on. Not the dwarf with the pie-face."

"They're fine, educated girls, both of them," I rejoined.

"Both of them! As if it was all the same to you!" At this she bent over and gave me a glare and a smile that brought the color to my face. "The tall one is certainly not bad-looking, but we don't call that pretty in this place."

"Are there many prettier ones?" I asked, gaily.

"I haven't counted them, but I can show you some girls who shine like the sun. There is one!" she said, pointing at a girl on the other side of the aisle. "A regular princess. Don't you think so?"

"She's a pretty girl, all right," I replied, "but in comparison with that tall one she's like a piece of cotton goods alongside of a piece of imported silk."

"Look at him! He's stuck on her. Does she know it? If she does not, I'll tell her and collect a marriage-broker's commission."

I loathed myself for having talked too much.

"I was joking, of course," I tried to mend matters. "All girls are pretty."

Luckily Mrs. Kalch's attention was at this point diverted by the arrival of the waiter with a huge platter laden with roast chicken, which he placed in the middle of the table. There ensued a silent race for the best portions. One of the other two women at the table was the first to obtain possession of the platter. Taking her time about it, she first made a careful examination of its contents and then attacked what she evidently considered a choice piece. By way of calling my attention to the proceeding, Auntie Yetta stepped on my foot under the table and gave me a knowing glance.

The noise in the dining-room was unendurable. It seemed as though everybody was talking at the top of his voice. The musicians—a pianist and two violinists—found it difficult to make themselves heard. They were pounding and sawing frantically in a vain effort to beat the bedlam of conversation and laughter. It was quite touching. The better to take in the effect of the turmoil, I shut my eyes for a moment, whereupon the noise reminded me of the Stock Exchange.

The conductor, who played the first violin, was a fiery little fellow with a high crown of black hair. He was working every muscle and nerve in his body. He played selections from "Aida," the favorite opera of the Ghetto; he played the popular American songs of the day; he played celebrated "hits" of the Yiddish stage. All to no purpose. Finally he had recourse to what was apparently his last resort. He struck up the "Star-spangled Banner". The effect was overwhelming. The few hundred diners rose like one man applauding. The children and many of the adults caught up the tune joyously, passionately. It was an interesting scene. Men and women were offering thanksgiving to the flag under which they were eating this good dinner, wearing these expensive clothes. There was the jingle of newly-acquired dollars in our applause. But there was something else in it as well. Many of those who were now paying tribute to the Stars and Stripes were listening to the tune with grave, solemn mien. It was as if they were saying: "We are not persecuted under this flag. At last we have found a home."

Love for America blazed up in my soul. I shouted to the musicians, "My Country," and the cry spread like wildfire. The musicians obeyed and we all sang the anthem from the bottom of our souls.

CHAPTER IV

I was in the lobby, chatting with the clerk across his counter and casting glances at the dining-room door. Miss Tevkin had not yet finished her meal and I was watching for her to appear. Presently she did, toying with Miss Siegel's hand.

"Feeling better now?" I asked, stepping up to meet them. "I hope you enjoyed your dinner."

"Oh, we were so hungry, I don't think we knew what we were eating," Miss Tevkin returned, politely.

"Going to take the air on the veranda?"

"Why—no. We are going out for a walk," she answered in a tone that said as clearly as words that my company was not wanted. And, nodding with exaggerated amiability, they passed out.

The blood rushed to my face as though she had slapped it. I stood petrified. "It's all because of Mrs. Kalch's tongue, confound her!" I thought. "Tomorrow I shall be in Tannersville and this trifling incident will be forgotten." But at this I became aware that I did not care to go to Tannersville and that the prospect of seeing Fanny had lost its attraction for me. I went back to the counter and attempted to resume my conversation with the clerk, but he was a handsome fellow, which was one of his chief qualifications for the place, and so I soon found myself in the midst of a bevy of girls and married women. However, they all seemed to know that I was a desirable match and they gradually transferred their attentions to me, the girls in their own interests and the older matrons in those of their marriageable daughters. Their crude amenities sickened me. One middle-aged women tried to monopolise me by a confidential talk concerning the social inferiority of the Catskills.

"The food is good here," she said, in English. "There's no kick comin' on that score. But my daughter says with her dresses she could go to any hotel in Atlantic City, and she's right, too. I don't care what you say."

I fled as soon as I could. I went to look for a seat on the spacious veranda. I said to myself that Miss Tevkin and Miss Siegel must have had an appointment with some one else and that I had no cause for feeling slighted by them.

I felt reassured, but I was lonely. I was yearning for some congenial company, and blamed fate for having allowed Miss Tevkin to make another engagement—if she had.

The veranda was crowded and almost as noisy as the dining-room had been. There was a bubbub of broken English, the gibberish being mostly spoken with selfconfidence and ease. Indeed, many of these people had some difficulty in speaking their native tongue. Bad English replete with literal translations from untranslatable Yiddish idioms had become their natural speech. The younger parents, however, more susceptible of the influence of their children, spoke purer English.

It was a dark night, but the sky was full of stars, full of golden mystery. The mountains rose black, vast, disquieting. A tumultuous choir of invisible katydids was reciting an interminable poem on an unpoetic subject that had something to do with Miss Tevkin. The air was even richer in aroma than it had been in the morning, but its breath seemed to be part of the uncanny stridulation of the katydids. The windows of the dancing-pavilion beyond the level part of the lawn gleamed like so many sheets of yellow fire. Presently its door flew open, sending a slanting shaft of light over the grass.

Marriages

Silver-Jacobs

The marriage of Dorothy, daughter of Max Jacobs, 2281 Dundas Street West, to Abe Silver, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Silver, 452 Queen Street West, was solemnized Wednesday, September 18th, at Ostrowtzer Synagogue, Cecil and Spadina Avenue. Rabbi Okivah Barenstein performed the ceremony. The bride who was given in marriage by Mr. and Mrs. A. Gotlib, cousins of the groom, wore egg-shell satin and tight bodice with rhinestone buckle at the side. The skirt was made in drape effect a little longer at the sides. Her veil of silk tulle was banded with flowered lace, and caught at the head with orange blossoms. She also wore long white gloves and carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses, lilies-of-the-valley, 'mums, white orchids and baby's breath. Miss Shirley Jacobs, of New York, sister of the bride, was maid of honour. She wore a mauve taffeta gown made in princess style, trimmed with purple taffeta, caught in the back with a large bow trimmed with tulle and an uneven hemline. Her hat and shoes matched and she carried an arm bouquet of American beauty roses and baby's breath. The bridesmaids were Miss Gertrude Jacobs, of New York, in powder blue satin, tight bodice, the skirt made long in the front and back, short at the sides, caught in the back by a drape shined and trimmed with rhinestones on the front waistline. Miss Mildred Jacobs, of New York, was gowned in Nile green satin trimmed with green tulle, long back with a soft bow, caught at the back of the gown. Miss Esther Jacobs, of New York, wore a peach satin with tight bodice, the skirt trimmed with tulle with picot edged waistline and uneven hemline. Miss Lena Jacobson, of Rochester, N. Y., wore sky blue chiffon, trimmed with shaize and flesh colour at the back of the gown, forming a long line. Miss Dorothy Winestock wore white chiffon, trimmed with a green satin bow at the front and forming a long back. All the bridesmaids wore hats and shoes to match their gowns, and carried arm bouquets of roses. The flower girls were Dorothy Gotlib, dressed in white crepe with flowers and streamers of ribbons, and Shirley Linsen in pink crepe trimmed with tulle and ribbon streamers. Each carried a basket of roses and rose petals. Mildred Harrison, dressed in pink georgette with streamers, and Henrietta Farb, in maize crepe with streamers, were carrying the bride's veil. The ring bearers, Albert and Joe Silver, nephews of the groom, carried the ring on a white satin hand-made cushion. Mannie Kerbel was best man. Groomsmen were Nathan Mendelson, Al Sesslusky, Harry Steinberg, Ben Sackler and Henry Sackin. Sam Silver was master of ceremonies and Norman Sky was toastmaster, assisted by Sam Silver. The bride and groom with their parents received congratulations at Old Spain where a dinner was served to 100 guests. Mrs. M. Jacobs wore a gown of black silk velvet in side drape and a corsage of roses. Mrs. Charles Silver was gowned in black transparent velvet, with a corsage of roses; Mrs. A. Gotlib in peach georgette with corsage of roses. A reception and dance was held to 180 guests. Miss Esther Jacobs, sister of the bride, gave songs and impersonations. The couple are spending their honeymoon in Atlantic City, Detroit and Windsor. The bride travelled in an ensemble of beige and sand with beige kid shoes and beige hat. The out-of-town guests were Mrs. I. Jacobson, of Rochester, N.Y., aunt of the bride; Misses Shirley, Gertrude, Mildred and Esther Jacobs, of New York, formerly of Toronto, sisters of the bride; Miss Lena Jacobson, of Rochester, cousin of the bride and Mrs. S. Salba, of New York. Mr. and Mrs. A. Silver will live at 652 Queen Street West.

Makers of Fully-Aged Chocolates "THE CLUB CHEST"

Hold Protest Meeting

At a general meeting of representatives of a number of the Jewish organizations and synagogues of Toronto indignation was expressed against an editorial, "We Pacifists," by Rabbi Maurice Eisendrath, which appeared in the CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW of September 20. A resolution unanimously endorsed was to the effect that the editorial under discussion was "untrue and anti-Jewish and therefore damaging to the Jewish People and the Cause of Palestine." The meeting expressed opposition to Rabbi Eisendrath as contributing of the REVIEW.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of dear son and brother, Morris Shore, age 24, who passed away September 28, 1928.
One year has passed since that sad day,
God called the one we loved away,
Forget him, No, we never will,
As years roll on, we miss him more.
The blow was great, the shock severe
We little thought the end was near.

It is only those who have lost can tell,
The sorrow of parting without farewell.
But God is good, He gave us strength to bear our heavy loss.
Never forgotten and sadly missed by Father, sisters, Mrs. Bertha David and Sophie and brother Sam.

In sad and loving memory of our dear mother and grandmother, Annie Sharkofsky, who died September 16, 1924.
Too dearly loved to be forgotten.
Inserted by Rina Beder and Florence Silverman.

In loving memory of our dear mother and grandmother, Mrs. Annie Sharkofsky, who died September 16, 1924. As years go by, we miss you more. Inserted by Mary and Louis Levine and family.

To Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Shabell, of Los Angeles, (formerly Gertrude Teich, of Toronto), at the Hollywood Hospital, Monday, September 23, a son; 8 lbs. 12 ounces.

BENEFIT PARTY

Mrs. S. Shapiro, Lyndhurst Avenue, gave a garden card party at her home, Monday, September 23, in aid of the Palestine Relief Fund. 130 guests attended.

"A big item in household science" is the handling of the family wash problem. We have solved it for an ever-increasing number of Toronto housewives. Our work is very, very good and, furthermore, it is an actual money saving over the best of home methods. For these reasons, progressive women in this city are gradually succumbing gracefully to the inevitable and are removing "family wash" from the home, where it no longer belongs, to this laundry, which modern science has developed and courteous service has maintained. Our young ladies are waiting for you to phone—or stop any of our drivers on the street—for full information.

Editorial

Alas for our lack of practice in deciphering crossword puzzles! We could not for the life of us make out the cleverly tangled reasoning of the Rabbi. Finally, in despair we felt like exclaiming in the language of Octavus Roy Cohen's heroes: "Well, is we is, or is we ain't pacifists?"

II

Rabbi Eisendrath is a newcomer in Toronto. We should enjoy greeting him heartily, and offering him our best hospitality. We confess, however, that after reading his last editorial in the REVIEW, we were much too outraged to indulge in social amenities. Worry not, dear Rabbi, we really do not care a straw about the academic piffle as to whether we are pacifists "innately" or merely as a result of a "peace-loving tradition". Phraseology which purports to symbolize the "gentile, or more politely the 'goy' as a tiger or lion, and the Jew as a lamb or dove" is not worth repeating. What matters is that from under the cloak of tattered pseudo-logic there sticks out a strangely ugly attitude towards the tragic events in Palestine. Insinuated in the midst of the tortuous reasoning there is a chain of crude innuendoes that the Jews are blameworthy in the mixup.

Denuded of its ratiocinative cobwebs, Rabbi Eisendrath's editorial stands out as a series of taunts, insults and libels at the Jews in their relation to Palestine. The allusion to the "Moses Levys who do their fighting by sending the John Smiths to the front" is a cheap sneer, contradicting the Rabbi's own statement in a previous paragraph that "the records of the late war, wherein thousands of Moses Levys despite the contentions of Lewisohn, actually did 'thrill to the flutter of the flag'."

What defense can the Rabbi in his reflective moments offer to justify the innuendo contained in a statement like this: "Granted, that in the main, the Jew has not sought to slay every Arab in sight"? Does the Rabbi wish his readers to infer that the Jew in the main, or otherwise, has sought to slay every second, or every tenth, or every hundredth Arab in sight?

Have the Jews been seeking to slay Arabs?

The Rabbi says: "Such are the effects then of Jewish chauvinism and Jewish Nationalism. Soldiers, cannon, bayonets, and military law, however, will not permanently remedy the situation". The implication is there that Jewish nationalism is synonymous with soldiers, cannon, bayonets and military law, and that it is responsible for the effects which are now being discussed.

It is needless to quote isolated excerpts. Throughout the second part of the article wherein the generalizations of "mighty Maurice Samuel" and "Lusty Ludwig Lewisohn" are given specific application there runs this general idea: The Jews alone are to blame for the disturbances: their Zionism; their militarism; their lack of militarism; their nationalism; their lust for blood. And at the same time there is not a single allusion or suggestion that the Arabs were in any way guilty.

Theme spinning is a fascinating diversion and those inexperienced in the art often allow themselves to be beguiled away from realities. In this case it appears that the Rabbi has permitted his anxiety to round out a preachment on a text to lure him into a morass of absurdities. Pacifists the Jews may or not be (who cares!) but why is it necessary for the sake of arguing this point to charge the Jews in Palestine with militaristic aggression? Why talk about bayonets, and fortresses and cannons, and armies? Can the Rabbi point to any party in Zionism that advocates conquest by force or thinks of Palestine in terms of bayonets?

Assuming that for some reason the Jews ought to be pacifists, does that mean that when attacked by a mob of rioters they should not lift a finger to defend themselves? Are they to be reviled and condemned because they did not lie down passively and permit to be slaughtered like sheep? Even "Mighty Maurice" Samuel the so-called propounder of the theory of innate Jewish pacifism—he who is supposed to have gone even farther than Rabbi Eisendrath in this doctrine—he is now in Palestine as a newspaper correspondent, and he certainly does not throw it up to the Jews that they are militarists for resisting massacres.

Civilized people everywhere without taking sides on the ultimate issues involved are unhesitating in condemning the atrocities of the Arabs and in offering their sympathy to the Jews in their grief. It remained for a young Rabbi to perform the ceremony of foisting the guilt on his own people. May we commend him to the company of the Jewish communists of New York and the scholars and thinkers of their organ the "Morning Freiheit" (banned in Canada) who share his views on the subject.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, minerals, water power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate, farming, and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

effective participation of American Jewry in the building of a Jewish national homeland in Palestine.

The decision to call such a conference followed a general discussion of the Palestine situation in which Dr. Stephen S. Wise, honorary president of the Congress, placed responsibility for the recent outbreak directly in the lap of Great Britain. If Great Britain had held herself responsible for the actions of the Arabs such an incident could never have occurred, he asserted.

"The British Government in Palestine did not bear itself in such a manner for the Arabs to take it seriously," he said. "Had the British Government led the Arabs to understand that the Jews were not in Palestine to rob them, but to help them and to cooperate with them and if it had made them understand that they must dwell in peace with the Jewish people, the outbreak would have been impossible."

Had the Madison Square Garden protest meeting taken place a month before the outbreak it might have had some effect, Dr. Wise said, in urging that the national conference be held as soon as possible.

Representative Nathan D. Perlman, chairman of the executive committee, reported on the past activities of the congress in regard to the outbreak and urged that individuals continue to make "public and fearless statements of protest," which, he explained, frequently had more effect than the more reserved statements issued by official organizations.

Reports by Dr. Wise, who recently returned from abroad, on the work of the Council for the Rights of Jewish Minorities and the Zionist situation in Russia was deferred until a later meeting, in view of the importance of the Palestine discussion.

At the opening of the meeting the delegates rose, in response to a suggestion by Bernard S. Deutsch, the president, and stood for a minute in silent tribute to Louis Marshall.

Louis Marshalls' Funeral Simple Ceremony

In New York, September 24, the funeral of Louis Marshall, lawyer and philanthropist, who died in Zurich, Switzerland, on September 11, was held at the new Temple Emanu-El, Fifth Avenue and Sixty-Fifth Street.

About 4,000 persons, including representatives of more than fifty religious, social and philanthropic organizations, attended the simple ceremony. They bowed in reverence before Mr. Marshall's bier as it stood in the centre of the vast sanctuary on a low metal base, covered with a blanket of red roses and bathed in soft light which seeped down upon it through hidden apertures in the ceiling.

Outside, lining both sides of Fifth Avenue from Sixty-Eighth to Sixtieth street was a throng of 25,000 men, women and children who, unable to find room in the temple, waited for hours from early morning to pay a tribute of silence to Mr. Marshall.

The funeral ceremony was one of austere simplicity, contrasting markedly with the magnificence of the house of worship, whose portals were opened for the funeral in advance of the temple's official dedication, set for October 4.

It was in accordance with Mr. Marshall's wish that no elaborate ritual was conducted and no eulogies pronounced. Prayers, the reading of Psalms and music constituted the brief ceremony. Rabbi Samuel Schulman and Rabbi H. G. Enelow officiated. The body, accompanied by members of Mr. Marshall's family, officials of congregation Emanu-El, of which Mr. Marshall was president, and the honorary pallbearers, was taken to Salem Fields Cemetery in Brooklyn, where burial took place in the Marshall family plot. Here Rabbi Nathan Krauss read the traditional Jewish burial service. All those present threw white carnations into the grave as a final tribute.

Long before 10 a.m., the hour set for the service, a large crowd gathered outside the temple. A long line had formed at the temple door seeking admittance. Despite the efforts of the police to admit only those holding tickets, many who lacked tickets filtered in, and when the big bronze doors under the great arch of the building's facade had closed, fifteen minutes before the service began, many who had cards of admission were shut out.

Vehicular traffic was stopped along Fifth avenue from Sixty-First to Seventy-Second street during the service, and pedestrian traffic was diverted to the immediate vicinity of the temple. Fifth avenue buses were detoured to Madison avenue, and no eastward passage was allowed through Central Park until the temple service was over and the funeral cortege was well on its way to the cemetery.

Those who filled the synagogue—the general character of which is a modern adaptation of early Romanesque architecture as it was used in Syria and the East, included leaders in political, religious and civil life of various faiths and creeds.

Attending also was a group of negroes headed by James Weldon Johnson, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People, in whose work Mr. Marshall had long been interested.

Palestine Fears Revival of Clashes

September 22. The immediate outlook in Palestine was viewed with grave concern by the authorities. The fact that today, under pressure the Jews abandoned their agreed ritual for the dead in the recent disorders is indicative of the high tension still existing.

Today was the fortieth after the killing of the Jews in Jerusalem and, according to Hebraic law, a special memorial service for the dead should have been held. Such a service was arranged, but committees of those who feared the sermons would inflame further racial feeling and religious fanaticism prevailed and at the eleventh hour the rabbinate decided to abandon the service.

In the meantime police and military had made all preparations to handle the situation and at the hour set for the service armed forces ringed the city.

Feeling is now so tense that Arab shopkeepers remain their fezes when driving through Jewish quarters for fear of attack and Jews rather than pass an Arab in a road prefer to take the steep paths.

Little hope is felt that the bitter feeling will subside for some time to come and as a matter of fact it is considered unwise by the British authorities when the angry demonstrations arrive. It is also feared that the Arab population again may become excited with the approach of three important Jewish holidays, which are starting with a New Year celebration that the Jews will proceed to the Wailing Wall for prayers. It was on the Day of Atonement last year that the Arabs attacked the Jews at the Wailing Wall, when the mufti of the Moslem Supreme Council in the government for only admitted 20 Jews at a time to pray. Jews, men and women worshippers in accordance with ritual [illegible]

From Hebron [illegible] the Patriarchs [illegible] Jews, the report goes, the spirit of Abraham has been moved to wrath and visibly from his burial place at the Cave of Machpelah, over which now stands a large Moslem mosque, a low moaning is heard, followed by a wail, then words, uttered indistinctly at first, then clearer: "Why have ye slaughtered my children? Why did ye shed innocent blood? Ye sons of Israel, why have ye dishonored your Father's name?"

The emotional Arabs are said to be terrified and many of them are asserted to be seeking means to propitiate the wrath of the Patriarch.

Type of proposed Jewish Hospital

And Now to Keep Our Promise — Our Word to Montreal

GREAT have been our promises to our City and grateful indeed has been her reception of them. She depends on us for much.

And on Sunday last a vast gathering of Jewish Hospital workers greeted with stirring cheers the announcement that the objective of our campaign had been increased from $600,000 to $1,000,000.

It took courage and great faith to make this tremendous increase of $400,000 in our objective, it will take great courage and hard work to make good our promised word but it shall be done, all Jewry is behind our pledge.

Do your part—your just share—WORK and GIVE, strenuously-generously. It is a great, a magnificent Gift we are about to make to Montreal. And as a result of our work and our gifts, a wonderous memorial will be created to stand forever to the honor and glory of our people.

All Montreal watches us. We have promised great things and only by great and strenuous efforts can we accomplish them. The reputation of our Jewish Community before our fellow citizens is in your hands and — Because of You — it can be made greater and finer.

We cannot — we must not — we will not fail.
